

To whom it may concern,

Re: Web Direct Services

As a small business, I required the services of web design company to create a web site to advertise our business. After seeing an advert in the local newspaper for Web Direct Services I decided to contact them as they offered a full design service at a very competitive rate.

When I met Liam, the proprietor of the business, I was surprised to see that he was still at school and carrying out this work during his spare time. However, do not be put off by this, I found Liam to be a very able and confident person. Although he may be young, his technical skills, professionalism and knowledge more than make up for this.

Throughout our discussions on the design of the site he acted in a very professional manner and was able to understand my requirements and quickly incorporate them into a design. The final product was both visually and technically as good as any small web design company could produce and I would have no hesitation in recommending Liam to any business or organisation wishing to have a web page designed.

Yours sincerely,
